

Acting Sensibly While Opposing: A Rare Commodity in the Lexicon of CID Politics

By Mezgebe Gebrekiristos

My friend used to say that commonsense is not common. Well, to his credit, it certainly is uncommon in the inner-circles of the Coalition for Unity and Democracy Party supporters. They claim as champions of democracy while suppressing dissent. They tout about unity at the cost of diversity and without consulting with all stakeholders. Worse yet, they form ungodly alliances and coalitions with separatist groups and known enemies of Ethiopia without an iota of concern for the unity of the country and the welfare of its people. And, they are doing all this –they proudly tell us--for the love of “Emiye” Ethiopia. Lord have mercy!

It is only natural to treat others the way someone wants to be treated. But, the recent comments by Elias Kifle, the publisher of the “Ethiopian Review”, make a mockery out of this millennia old cardinal rule. On his website, he commended the terrorist groups that perpetrated the killings of the 65 innocent Ethiopians and nine Chinese nationals in the Ogaden region. Furthermore, he offered his advice to the Oromo Liberation Front (OLF) to imitate the evil deeds of the ONLF and attack Sheik Al-Aloumidi’s companies.

Needless to say, Sheik Al-Amoudi’s is a God-sent investor who is doing his level best to help the country feed its people. In doing so, he employs several thousands of Ethiopians in his companies. He helps the poor through his philanthropy services. Now, would anyone with the right mind lose sleep to sabotage the interests of such a fine man? In my humble opinion, only the likes of Elias Kifle who are hell-bent to destroy Ethiopia, would contemplate doing that.

Unfortunately, Ato Elias Kifle is not alone—though in the minority-- in the struggle against the interests of Ethiopia and its people. People like Elias have made it their lofty duty to tarnish the image of Ethiopia for personal reasons. Devoid of the Ethiopian decency and respect for human life, their purpose on earth sees and hails the sufferings of others and is driven by idiosyncrasies they acquired during the defunct Derg era. That is why, they praise and herald wicked and terrorist acts such as the one mentioned above. They do such horrendous acts in the name of opposition. They oppose everything and anything the Ethiopian Peoples Revolutionary Democratic Party does. To CUD and its supporters, opposition is equated with animosity and its end result is a zero-sum game. This very primitive political culture of the CUD was vividly reflected in the aftermath of the recent most unprecedented national election where majority of them boycotted the joining the parliament.

However, CUD and its supporters must understand that it is possible to make sense out of oneself while opposing: One has to be only truly democratic and observant of the interests of others. Political decency sometimes requires acknowledging ones mistakes and supporting your opponent’s ideas for the common good of the country. In this regard, CUD’s current political maneuver is far from civilized political engagement and remains a lot to be desired.

While criticizing ones government may be appropriate and indispensable right of citizens, making a travesty of unfortunate murdering of innocent civilians is not, and borders an act of active terrorism. Condoning such an act takes a cold-blooded soul such as Elias’. It is in this light, this author advises Ato Elias Kifle to apologize for his unwise statements and to practice commonsense in his future publications.

My hear-felt condolence goes to the families who lost their loved ones in the barbaric attack on innocent civilians that was perpetrated by enemies of Ethiopia who hate to see her prosperity. All peace loving Ethiopians are in a somber mood over the tragedy, and yet, they are determined than ever not to be distracted from their developmental activities—never to bow to the enemies' wishes.
